doesn't mind annihilating the fence on the way.

Researchers say the first steps toward mind-reading and perception-manipulating technologies have already arrived. Through a concept called "neuro rights," they want to put in place safeguards for our most precious biological possessions: our mind.

A baby giraffe is fascinated when they discover their shadow for the first time.

With a limited supply of 3,500 units, Sega's Astro City Mini arcade console was nearly impossible to buy in the U.S. I got lucky, but the games library is a letdown and there are no hacks (yet).

YouTuber ActionAdventureTwins dropped a GoPro down a pipe using a 125-foot rope and they believe it might eventually lead to an abandoned mine.

Netflix adding some sort of gaming module to their current service brings to mind that in-flight entertainment option you get on long-haul flights.

You're now about to witness the speed of the world's fastest train. As one of the world's most expensive projects ever undertaken, can Japan make bullet trains the transportation du jour?
